

RIC FAASTeam presents:

See and Avoid! Dont Become The Next Mid Air Collision

The more flying hours you accumulate, the more likely you are to be able to relate at least one incident of a near miss incident or having had to execute an aggressive escape maneuver to avoid another aircraft. In this presentation, we will examine the flight scenarios and types of operation that present the greatest risk for an in-flight collision and best practices to avoid them. We will examine operations at, and in the vicinity of, towered and non-towered airports, the enroute on and off airway cross-country environment, and both VFR and IFR operations. We will analyze how pilot, crew, aircraft, environment, external factors and mission all play a role in both creating and mitigating collision risk. Practical examples will be discussed, drawing from thousands of hours of flight experience. After attending this seminar, you will be more aware and better prepared to avoid a serious or fatal mid-air collision. Don't miss this potentially life-saving presentation. Driving/Direction Recommendation
We recommend all those driving South on I-81 to look over your online or GPS directions. We'd advise all those traveling South on I-81 to not take route 501 South out of Lexington to Lynchburg. Although route 501 is a beautiful drive, it is winding road. We suggest you take I-64 East to Charlottesville and then US 29 South to 460 West to arrive at Liberty University.
